

Manonymous strikes again; angers the government of Vegeros

Vegeros convenes emergency cabinet meeting. President Khaleechi Daikonerys Tarragon of Vegeros releases a statement, “we will take the measures necessary to destroy Manonymous and to banish their hateful anti-human ideology. We are devoting resources and devising plans to turn Manonymous into a piece of history”.

December 1, 2017 - Manonymous, the shadowy extremist group and self-described “Planter Empowerment” organization executed a bloody attack in Landwern, the capital city of Vegeros. A police transport travelling on the outskirts of the city was severely damaged in an explosion. 15 policemen travelling in the transport were killed. A representative of the Vegeros Army special forces “Panda” Anti-Terror Unit, Mr. Hafuchka Tanhalash released a statement explaining that the explosion was caused by an improvised explosive device placed in the path of the police convoy. The attack itself suggested coordination and planning, and knowledge obtained regarding the routes to be taken by the police transport. The representative stated that all current indications point to Manonymous activists as having planted the explosive device.

Mr. Hafuchka Tanhalash on the job

The “Panda” Anti-Terror Unit, an elite unit of the Vegeros Army, were wearing their Panda bodysuits, which both honor the name of the unit the God of War Panda the Feared and the Terrible. As such, these uniforms serve to generate great awesome fear and respect of these special forces, considering the horrifying external appearance of the Panda. The Soldiers, heavily armed, patrolled the streets around where the attack occurred. The area was deserted for many hours, with local residents afraid to approach the unit in their terrifying uniforms.

Around the time of the attack, the website of the Vegeros Houses of Parliament, The Keesh, was apparently hacked. The homepage was replaced by the quote “There is no fundamental difference between man and animals in their ability to feel pleasure and pain, happiness, and misery”, which is of course attributable to Charles Darwin.

As is known, the “Planter” philosophy generally involves abstaining from the use of animal products and rejects the commodity status of animals. In recent decades, the Planter philosophy has gained many adherents in Vegeros. Planters have flourished in Vegeros because of the ease with which to follow a plant-based diet in a country where Vegerosians already abstain from eating meat. With the rise of Plantism in Vegeros, Planter communities have sprung up throughout Delicattesum, even establishing a local branch in Carnos. Planters are generally socially shunned in Delicattesum, and especially in Carnos, a fiercely meat-eating society.

Yesterday’s attack is the latest in a string of actions undertaken by Manonymous in Vegeros. Over the past six months, Manonimus activists have undertaken raids on a number of dairy farms, vandalized chicken coups and attacked convoys of livestock to release the animals while in transit. These actions are part of an ongoing campaign waged by Manonymous against the Vegerosian dairy and egg industry. The attack marks an escalation and represents the first time that Manonymous has launched an attack against Vegerosian municipal officials and not persons or bodies involved in the dairy and egg industry.

CCTV footage right in the center of Landwern

Manonymous have not yet made a statement regarding yesterday’s attack. John Snowpee, a spokesperson for the Plant-Based Alliance, a group ascribing to Planter ideology but opposed to Manonymous, categorically denied PBA involvement in the attack and once again disowned the Manonymous group, “we were not responsible for the attack. Manonymous does not act on behalf of the PBA. As a compassionate organization that respects all animals, including Human animals, we deplore and condemn the actions of Manonymous and pledge ourselves to eradicating such violent actions. We also deplore the cruel dairy and egg industry in Vegeros and call for an end to the oppression and exploitation of animals for food”.